Living the principles

From my first day on the job, I KNEW this was the field I was destined to work in. At UCP, we all have the same goal in mind—to help people who are vulnerable and too often stereotyped see themselves as a valued part of society. The most rewarding part of my job is helping someone advocate for himself in order to receive the services needed to live as independently as possible. Often, it's simply a matter of perspective. On those days when I may not feel successful, my efforts may have helped someone else move mountains. That alone is motivation to keep going!
